The Gothenburg Water Utilization Learning Center was developed to provide answers and solutions to current questions and issues raised in production agriculture. Their focus at the Learning Center is to help farmers achieve their yield and productivity goals with an emphasis on water utilization. You will get to see their three-pronged systems-based approach in helping farmers manage drought; native genes selected through traditional plant breeding, the additive impact of biotech traits and finally the additive impact of agronomic components of the systems. This three-pronged approach is quite different than their competitors.
